ROOSEVELT TALKS TO THE WEN OF WILLIAMS

DEGREE OF "DOCTOR OF HUMAN LETTERS" CONFERRED ON NATION'S CHIEF.

Special to the Boston American.
Theodore Roosevelt arrived early today at the home of President Henry Hopkins of Williams College, where he had passed the night. It was late when he retired, with the cheer of the Williams men who had received him there from the crash of 78 to 80 still ringing in his ears. When he looked out of the window of the guest chamber he saw many undergraduates and housepeople who had gathered outside of the building, waiting patiently under lowering clouds for another glimpse of the President. One of "Toby" greeted him when he arrived in his special train last evening, and they were raised enthusiastically everywhere he appeared.

All Berkshire There.
The President was received with the most enthusiasm by students and others in the great throng which attended the evening. It seemed as if all Berkshire County had come to Williams to see him. ## Case to Go to Supreme Court of United States on Appeal and Governor Is Expected to Grant Reprieve — Assurance That Hanging Will Not Take Place To-morrow Through Action of Judge Wheeler.

Special to the Boston American.

BRATTLEBORO, June 22.—Mary Rogers, condemned to death for the murder of her husband, has again been saved temporarily at least from the scaffold, and her attorneys are now confident that she will never be hanged.

Papers reprieving the condemned woman until Friday, December 1, 1905, have been prepared, and Governor Bell is expected to sign them as soon as presented.

The life or death journey of the pale-faced woman from the Windsor Prison to this city yesterday to attend the habeas corpus proceedings resulted in the announcement to-day by Judge Wheeler that he would grant the appeal of the woman and allow her case to go before the Supreme Court in Washington.

Before the appeal is officially granted, however, in order that legal complications may be obviated, Attorney-General Pitts will visit Governor Bell at Northfield this afternoon and, Judge Wheeler has been assured, the Governor will reprieve the woman until after the Supreme Court has passed on her case.

DOES NOT YET KNOW HER FATE.
Should the Attorney-General, by any mishap, fail to reach the Governor this afternoon and secure the reprieve Judge Wheeler will reprieve the woman until after the Supreme Court has passed on her case.

Reprieve Ready for Bell's Signature.
Attorney-General Pitts told the court that the reprieve had been written for more than two weeks, in preparation for the case of using it, if such a case as this arose.

The court was about to adjourn until Monday when Attorney-General Pitts, looking over the return to the writ filed by the Attorney-General in behalf of the State, and Superintendent, discovered that it had been written for more than two weeks. The Attorney-General said he would state the facts of the case and leave it to be judged whether the woman should be hanged. Rogers' attorneys insisted that he should not. Rogers' attorneys insisted that he should not. Rogers' attorneys insisted that he should not.

ELMER YOUNG SEES MAY HOPE IN JAIL

Boston Notary Visits Woman
Held in Nova Scotia Prison for Child Murder.

MICHIGAN, N. S. June 22.—Elmer E. Young, the Boston notary and private detective recently mentioned in connection with the case of Mrs. May Hope Young, who is charged with murdering her six-year-old daughter, and who claims to be the wife of a Boston lawyer, visited Mrs. Young in jail and had an interview with her.

Young was accompanied by Miss Hattie Hatfield of No. 9 Lansdowne street, Charleston, Mass., who witnessed the interview between Young and Mrs. Young.

Mrs. Young, mother of the murdered child, is said to be on her way to Nova Scotia to claim the body of the child. During the interview with Mrs. Young, Elmer Young told her to talk to no one but her counsel. He said that Melancthon was against her, and she said she did not care to be defended by his lawyer. She preferred to see her husband and the solicitor abandoned was sent her.

Young and his companion afterward went to Springfield, where the child was buried. Interest is running high, and townspeople and those who reside outside are eager to catch gazing, concerning the strange case. Young's companion would not talk with newspaper men. The whole case is surrounded with mystery, and at the preliminary examination yesterday, it will be interesting to see particularly on the Boston end of the story. It is reported that the mother of the dead child, will arrive here today. People who claim to know Elmer Young say she is a very attractive woman, and that she is very fond of her husband.

At last the weather has cleared and we will have a ball game this afternoon on the Huntington avenue grounds.
 Here it is again the middle of the week and no food for the fans in the way of news, and the chance to see the Chicago perform has been cut out because nature got stubborn and refused to turn on the sun.

Perhaps the most disgusted aggregation of ball fans that have visited the Sox this season have gathered around the City Square Hotel the last afternoon of days with nothing on their hands but to look up some kind of amusements, and that is hard to find with many of the show houses closed for the summer.
 The White Sox have good reason to feel slightly irritated under the favored season, as they were traveling fine till they struck wind and came on knocking up the good work, but the break in the streak may mean a similar occurrence in their playing line, while the Sox and their prospects are not any too bright.

"LITTLE CY" WILL FACE CARINNAS

Special to the Boston American.
 ST. LOUIS, June 22.—Flushed over yesterday's decisive victory over the Cardinals, the Terrapins are striding about the city today with their chests expanded to their limit. With an equal share of luck this afternoon they say they will for the first time turn the tables on the home squares.
 It will be "Young Cy" Young and "Bert" Brown on the firing line this afternoon and an excellent display of electricity the evening is looked for by the fans here. Young has been hit up rather hard in his last two games, and this afternoon he may be hit up after the home batters with a vengeance.
 "I think we have struck our gait at last," said Young, "and I am sure that my friends who have been with me since I was a kid will be glad to see me in the contract this year. I am confident that we will be high up in the first division at the close of the season."
 "I don't see where there is a outfield that has much of anything on Campbell, Beck and Delmonico. All three have had last things better rather than first things better, but I think they have got their eye on the ball, watch them closely in the infield, while we have been rained at there. It is a good one, McClellan, Abby, Barker and myself are beginning to get on to each other's style of play, and if we can improve our hitting a bit there will certainly be some thing doing."
 "I am looking for another pitcher. I have got my eye on a good one and may sign him before the season opens. With this fellow, coupled with Fanning, White and the other fellows, we are doing as good as any team in the league."

Miss Rose Pastor, Millionaire's Fiancee,
Pays Only $40 for a Simple Wedding Gown

Study of the Ghetto Girl by Beatrice Fairfax

OUT are all familiar with the name of Rose Pastor, the talented young woman who is soon to marry Graham Phillips Stokes, the University Settlement worker.

Perhaps you will be interested in hearing an account of her as I saw her the other day. I had been asked to meet her at an afternoon tea given in her honor by a young woman friend.

I was anxious to meet her for several reasons—first and foremost because I had heard so much of her wonderful charm and personality, and secondly, for the purely feminine reason that I had overheard a young man remark that he considered her the best-dressed woman he had ever met.

Those eyes, I am sure are the windows of a beautiful soul.

Miss Pastor's face is full of the warmth that only comes to those who get the highest joy out of life, the joy that comes through service.

That she is artistic is shown by the way she dresses her hair.

It is beautiful hair, with gleams of red showing through the brown richness.

It is parted and drawn softly back from her face and twisted in a loose knot at the back of her head.

I breathed a sigh of relief when I saw there was no disfiguring pompadour towering above her broad forehead.

It would have seemed out of place with that gentle, intelligent face.

Her dress was simplicity itself—a well-made, well-fitting brown skirt and a waist of some soft creamy white material that blended perfectly with the brown of the skirt.

Some way or other I can imagine Miss Pastor usually wearing brown. With her hair and eyes, brown is sure to be her favorite color.

I rather fancy that Miss Pastor understands the true art of dressing appropriately to occasion.

Her manner was as simple as her dress. Apparently there is not one atom of affectation about her.

She is a girl of a secret of her success, both in love and friendship, and she shows she knows hands—that are delicate.

You know some people have a way of shaking hands that leaves you a half-hearted feeling of disappointment, as though you had grasped handful of fog.

And while they are holding your hand in their weak-fingered, meaningless grasp, they look up, down, right or left, any place but in your eyes.

But Miss Pastor doesn't shake hands like that.

She looks you straight in the eye and takes your hand in a warm, firm grasp, a clasp which says as clearly as words, "I am glad to meet you."

And that is Miss Pastor, as I saw her, surrounded by many people anxious to meet her, and turning to me with the same ardent sincerity of manner.

MISS PASTOR'S bridal gown is of white dotted muslin, with square neck and elbow sleeves, with little trimming and ever so little frills here at the neck and elbow sleeves.

At the bottom of the skirt, made so that it will not touch the floor, are three deep tucks. The neck of the gown is finely shirred, and there is also fine shirring at the bottom of the bodice.

The plan of the dress was simplicity itself, and the whole effect is one of crispness and daintiness, without the slightest ostentation.

When Miss Pastor took of introduction to the fashionable dressmaker to whom she had been directed, she said:

"I want something simple. I won't have anything pretentious. The dressmaker, who is visited by the most select New York fashionable ladies, brought out a piece of white cloth, and said:

"That's just the thing," said Miss Pastor.

"I was just to be my best dress," said Miss Pastor in ordering it. "No, I don't want any trims. I want to wear this often."

EXPERT ADVICE ON HOW TO CARE FOR BABY DURING THE SUMMER

What Baby Must Have
Light clothing, always clean.
One bath daily.
Plenty of fresh air.
Shelter from the sun.
A careful nursing plan.

A child's healthy condition. In summer it should be kept in the open air as much as possible, and when indoors all the windows should be open. The thing that must be carefully guarded against is exposure to the sun. Even when a child is out of doors to run and play it is best to be careful for fear of sunstroke, but the strong light is exceedingly bad for a mere infant's eyesight. Select the shady side of the street and the shade in the park when taking baby out for an airing.

Most mothers are particularly trying for the little baby, and with proper care and attention during the hot weather, they may result which are fatal to the child's future health.

A baby's clothing should never be anything but clean and cool. Any very tight clothing should be discarded. Covered receptacles containing water and cooled and carried out systematically each day they soon become a habit. Mothers will save much trouble by keeping their children in healthy condition, and building up their resistance to help them fight their way through life.

SUGGESTIONS ON HOW TO SPEND YOUR SATURDAY HALF-HOLIDAY

FROM start to finish interest in the BOSTON AMERICAN's half-holiday contest was the keener. Although the competition for the five clearing-up prizes was keen, many letters were received at the north hour that a number will be printed each day this week.

A perfect place for lunch. When good food and beautiful surroundings are combined, the result is a pleasant and refreshing meal. No 218 Park street, Dorchester.

Ride to Marblehead
A ride to Marblehead makes a delightful afternoon's vacation. Take the car to Salem station, level in sweet country air and enjoy the view as you ride across the water.

Don't Play Too Hard
Spend the week-day half-holiday in recreation, preferably in the open air. Don't get so tired that you return home feeling more than when you started. In fact, try to get on for two or three days the time you are away from an active pastime.

"The idea is preposterous," he said. "It is a question of money and money only. If you will allow me to leave the matter entirely in my hands and give me carte blanche to do as I please, I have not the slightest doubt that I can do everything that I want about $15,000."

"I don't," George ended bravely. "I am not going to a bit of money, but I am going to leave him in the hands of a man who will not let him believe me quite."

MISS VINCENT DENIES STORY OF ENGAGEMENT

Says She Is Not Going to Marry Aged Admirer, and Repudiates His Statements.

HAS RETIRED TO COUNTRY.

KINGSTON, Mass., June 22.—Miss Vincent, aged eighty-five, has claimed to be engaged to marry him, to retire near her to escape the notoriety resulting from his statements.

She denies the existence of any engagement between them, although she acknowledges that they were engaged at one time. "Mr. Hutchinson is perfectly well aware of the situation," she says, "and he is giving interviews to the press which are almost unbearable to any one situated as I am. Some few years ago Mr. Hutchinson did propose to me, and I suppose that there was an understanding, based upon certain conditions."

Break Engagement.
"What these conditions were I do not care to state, but they were never carried out, and I informed him that I should consider the engagement broken. He understood it when I left him, and since that time I have not heard a word from him directly, although I have corresponded with my mother."

"I thought I left him I called upon Mr. Hutchinson and told him that I should consider the engagement off, and he said that he felt sorry and wished me to remain. He promised me money and bonds, and said that he had them in his pocket ready to give over to me if I would not let it all there was in it."

"Mr. Hutchinson was a persistent woman made frequent calls upon me at the home of my mother. He would mention certain things, but I afterward found that he was not able to carry them out."

Engagement No Secret.
"There is no secret that at one time I was engaged to Mr. Hutchinson. I told my mother and sister about it. He was a very interesting man to meet. He told me that he would take me to Europe, give me the benefit of a good medical education, and we would travel as long as I wished."

"I was unable to see how the expenses could be paid, and the matter would have been dropped had it not been for the fact that I was a devoted girl. In fact, the only gift he ever made me was a violin."

3 MORE CITIES PLAN FOR MUNICIPAL GAS PLANTS

HEWY STERLING, Malden, Melrose and Everett May Follow Melrose's Lead in Gas Plant.

The movement started by Melrose, whose board of aldermen has voted to erect a municipal gas plant, it is believed will be taken up by other cities in this vicinity. The question of the construction of gas plants for the city of Melrose has been the subject of much discussion in the city of Melrose.

Melrose has now come from the Malden Gas Company, which supplies Malden, Melrose and Everett, also, Alderman Sterling, in discussing the situation with a reporter of the BOSTON AMERICAN, said:

"This is the first step to the right direction. It is the preliminary step toward the establishment of a municipal lighting plant, which will mean better service and cheaper gas for Melrose citizens. They have become disgusted with the methods of the Malden Gas Company. They have it is about time to do something in their own behalf."

Alderman Herbert E. Staples, one of the city of Melrose, said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"I think we Melrose people are being deceived by the Malden Gas Company. The action taken by the Melrose Board of Aldermen is a step in the right direction. The citizens of Melrose have been deceived long enough by the gas and electric light companies here. It is time for a change."

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST

80 AND 82 SUMMIT ST., BOSTON, JUNE 22, 1935

The Funeral of Jimmy Hope

Was the Funeral of American Ideal? No, Only a Phase of Growth and Change

He makes a poor showing beside modern financiers, who would hardly take the trouble to steal as little as two millions. But you must remember that poor Jimmy Hope was only a burglar. He wasn't a trust owner, a United States Senator, a life insurance manager—he wasn't even the head of a bank.

The easy, modern roads to fortune were closed to him. His was a rough road to success—the jimmy, the dark lantern, acid, saw, file, dynamite, stool pigeons, much industry and patience made the progress of Jimmy Hope pathetically slow.

He worked harder and longer to steal a few millions than other men have worked to steal hundreds of millions. He spent many years in jail.

Now that Jimmy Hope is gone, however, we see that he followed practically the usual routine in modern business methods in high finance. His funeral, like his life, WAS A SUCCESS.

It was necessary to conceal the hour of the funeral to prevent the attendance of an overwhelming crowd. Among the men who—BAREHEADED AND RESPECTFUL—followed Jimmy Hope's corpse to the grave there were—one Congressman of the United States, one Commissioner of Police, the President of a Board of Aldermen in a great city, several "political leaders," and others whose profession of making friends COMPELS THEM TO ATTEND THE FUNERALS OF THE DISTINGUISHED AND WORTHY.

It is likely that the men who established this government would have been somewhat discouraged could they have looked ahead a hundred and twenty-nine years to see Congressional, Aldermanic and police representatives following to the grave, with sympathy and respect, a burglar, a repeatedly convicted felon.

It is discouraging to think that when James Hope, the burglar, went to his grave, with political and other criminals behind him, HONEST MEN found themselves without friends, influence or consideration. BECAUSE THEY HAD BEEN HONEST.

Our trouble is that the example set in high places is imitated in the low.

The Congressman and former State Senator who followed the burglar to the grave will probably tell his friends quite truly that he has known men at least as dishonest in the Senate of the United States, in New York City's office of Mayor, in the chair of the Governor at Albany.

The Police Commissioner, the President of the Board of Aldermen, the other unconsciously depraved followers of the burglar's funeral would be able to justify their attendance at that funeral according to their light.

Each would say:
"I have taken money, and BIG money, from men not fit to tie Jimmy Hope's shoes. Jimmy Hope TOOK A CHANCE. He broke into the bank vault, and once knocked himself unconscious with an explosion of dynamite, relying on his friends to pull him out when the explosion was over. He stole from rich banks that could afford it. The big, RESPECTABLE men whose money I have taken STOLE FROM THE POOR AND HELPLESS. They NEVER took a chance; they never ran a risk of any kind. If bishops and all the respectable people can follow the funeral of a big gas thief, or treat as a respectable man George B. McClellan, the Gas Mayor, I CAN AFFORD TO ATTEND THE FUNERAL OF A DECENT BANK BURGLAR. His business is cleaner than that of the men with whom I do business ordinarily."

The men who attended Jimmy Hope's funeral, while dull and ignorant, were frank and charmingly free from hypocrisy.

They have mixed for years with "the better classes." They have found out that the object of "the better classes" in mixing with politicians was to arrange for the robbery of poor people and defenceless people.

Among those who attended the funeral of the burglar that had successfully attacked bank vaults and risked bullets there were some that would have refused contemptuously to follow the funeral of the eminently respectable, COWARDLY thieves that rob the unprotected by bribing their elected officials.

Modern financial and political conditions in America were well represented at Jimmy Hope's funeral.

But we needn't be discouraged, or move to England, like Astor, with the idea that republican government is a failure.

The burglar's funeral simply teaches us THAT REPUBLICAN INSTITUTIONS CANNOT BE MADE PERFECT IN A DAY. The Declaration of Independence doesn't change human nature. Men cannot learn to govern themselves in a century, any more than children can learn to walk in an hour. We must have many falls, many Jimmy Hope funerals, many "Equitable trust-ship," many public officials selling themselves to corporations and obsequiously burying burglars.

The great public, which has undertaken to manage its own affairs, must expect to be MANY kinds of a fool. The main thing is that it should not be the same kind of fool TOO MANY TIMES IN SUCCESSION.

We ought to learn a lesson from Jimmy Hope's burial. It ought to make us understand what standards we establish among public officials by our indifference to dishonesty in office.

We ought to be ashamed of ourselves when we see officials of the nation, the city and the State frankly confessing that they are glad to honor a confessed PROFESSIONAL CRIMINAL, because he is so much more honest and straightforward than the ordinary social and financial "RESPECTABLE" with whom they "do business."

Too Many Wants Tend To Make Us Wretched

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

"Man wants but little here below, Nor wants that little long." It is the poet, and a great truth was never told. But it is a pity that the poet did not use the word "wants." It is perfectly true that we need but little here below—and that is what the poet meant to say—but it is, unfortunately, anything but true that we want but little. Our wants—our artificial longings—are innumerable, endless, ever-growing, ever-insatiable, and thereby hangs the tale of our human misery. Our needs—the things that are required to enable us to properly live our life and adequately fulfill the ends of our being—are few and simple. As another poet has written: "A field of corn, a fountain, and a wood Is all the wealth by Nature understood." Something to eat, something to drink, and something to keep us warm. Food, clothing, shelter. These are the three great necessities of our human nature. These things we must have, in order that we may live and do our work, but we should concern ourselves with them no further than is necessary. A plenty of good, wholesome food is better than all the signs of the epicure; a comfortable dwelling place, large enough, but not too large, with a pulley, and the glass of pure, cool water is better than any other drink that was ever provided by Nature or invented by man. With comfortable shelter, wholesome food, and the drink which "cleans but not intoxicates," we are all ready for the proper doing of our work and for the proper enjoyment of the beautiful world in which we live. The Creator has placed us. But we are such fools we cannot, or that the Philippines will ever do us.

The editorial in last Friday's issue of the BOSTON AMERICAN was timely and just.
